Protecting What Powers Our Communities

INSIGHTS • DEREK HOYLE • JULY 05, 2026

Every city has a heartbeat. You hear it in the hum of the lights, the flow of clean water, the systems running quietly beneath the streets that keep everything above ground working the way it's supposed to.

Every city has a heartbeat. You hear it in the hum of the lights, the flow of clean water, the systems running quietly beneath the streets that keep everything above ground working the way it's supposed to.

Most people never think about what's below. That's exactly the point.

Underground utilities are the anatomy of a community. Electric power is the heartbeat — powering every moment of every day. Potable water is the lifeblood — essential, constant, non-negotiable. Sanitary sewer and storm systems are the detox network — removing what the city no longer needs, protecting the environment it depends on. Gas, oil, and steam are the energy source — fueling homes, businesses, and the industries that keep people employed. Fiber and communication lines are the nervous system — the signals that connect us to each other and to the world. Reclaimed water is the recycler — sustaining growth while protecting tomorrow. When those systems are known, mapped, and protected, life above ground doesn't skip a beat. When they're not — projects stop. Services go down. People could get hurt.

Our Work Happens Out of Sight. Its Impact Is Felt Everywhere.

Center Line Locating exists to protect the infrastructure that communities run on. Our crews locate, map, expose underground utilities, and inspect storm and sanitary sewer lines so the work above ground can proceed safely — without the strikes, delays, and damage that happen when what's below isn't fully understood. It's damage prevention work. It's precision work. And in Charlotte and across the Carolinas, it's the work that keeps everything connected.

Center Line Locating supports project teams across Charlotte, the Carolinas, and the Southeast with utility locating, utility mapping, hydro excavation, CCTV inspections, detention system cleaning, confined space projects, and trenchless pipe repair services. Woman-owned. HUB certified. City of Charlotte vendor.
